

I understand that the FCC is expanding the broadcast service known as LPFM which could take over translator stations, such as KLOVE on 88.7 in the Midland/Odessa Texas area. Proponents of LPFM feel there is little value in these stations. I respectfully disagree. If value only means money this may be true, but KLOVE serves a more valuable and important role in providing Christian music to my family and community. I don't have to worry about what is said on KLOVE radio when my children are listening, unlike some other stations. Please do not allow this to become a money issue rather than community service issue. Thank You.
